A brand-new music event is heading to Soho this summer. Curated in association with local tastemakers Soho Radio, Sounds of Summer is designed to reflect the essence of Soho, capturing the heart and soul of this iconic London destination while celebrating its rich musical legacy and supporting contemporary talent.

Bringing together some of London's most celebrated artists, Sounds of Summer kicks off with musical acts on Carnaby Street on Saturday 20th July. Across the wider Soho neighbourhood, venues will be introducing fresh music programming and curations to keep the sound going all summer long. New opening, The Little Violet Door will be hosting DJ-led house parties every Wednesday-Saturday, whilst intimate bar Under The Counter will be playing an eclectic, daily rotation of jazz, R&B, funk and more, with guest DJs taking to the decks every Friday and Saturday from 9pm till midnight. Visitors will also be able to catch daily jam sessions at London's home of the blues, Ain't Nothin But.

The Broadwick Hotel is hosting an artful evening of vinyl spinning, as Jack White's iconic Soho Third Man Records store delegates their finest disc jockeys to take over the Flute stage on 17th July and for great food, drinks and live music, unconventional Japanese restaurant Inko Nito is launching DJ nights, every Friday from 6:30 PM to 10:30 PM.
